By Eric Voegelin Science Politics

Science, Politics and Gnosticism comprises two essays by Eric Voegelin (1901-85), arguably one of the most provocative and influential political philosophers of the last century. In these essays, Voegelin contends that certain modern movements, including positivism, Hegelianism, Marxism, and the "God is dead" school, are variants of the gnostic tradition he identified in his classic work The New Science of Politics.

The New Science of Politics (NSP henceforth) is packed and packed with information, but unlike most philosophers, Voegelin keeps the length of the book short. This isn't to say the NSP lacks nuance, however. Voegelin's ideas are provocative, full of substance, and not your average everyday take on the political.

Eric Voegelin's Science, Politics and Gnosticism was a bit like encountering a memory stick; I haven't read the theorists he analyzes for many years. Fortunately, he quotes generously to make his points, so I wasn't reliant on my memory alone. Voegelin would have been a great help to me in my youth.

Eric Voegelin, The New Science of Politics: An Introduction (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1987), 78. "The temptation to fall from uncertain truth into certain untruth is stronger in the clarity of Christian faith than in other spiritual structures." Eric Voegelin, Science, Politics, and Gnosticism (Wilmington: ISI Books, 2004) 83.

The Necessity of Political Theology in Political Science ...

Nearly sixty-five years ago, Eric Voegelin delivered a series of lectures at the University of Chicago under the sponsorship of the Walgreen Foundation. These lectures were subsequently published the following year and The New Science of Politics quickly became a best seller in political theory. [1] Many viewed the book as an apology for political theory and while this is partially correct, it obscures the true significance of Voegelin's work.

Eric Voegelin was a German-American political philosopher. He was born in Cologne, and educated in political science at the University of Vienna where he became an associate professor of political science in its law faculty. In 1938 he and his wife fled from the Nazi forces which had entered Vienna. They emigrated to the United States, where they became citizens in 1944. He spent most of his academic career at Louisiana State University, the University of Munich and the Hoover Institution of Sta
