Faith is a large part of The Lighting Thief. Being half-bloods, Percy and his friends often face danger. They have to hope and pray that their immortal parents will help them survive; they must rely on faith. Percy must trust his father Poseidon, as pictured. On page 211, for example, Percy says, "“Father, help me.”"

In "The Lightning Thief" I feel that most of the time the book takes place in New York or at camp half-blood. Though Percy, Annabeth, and Grover spend a good deal of the book traveling cross-country to reach the underworld, the story starts in New York, and ends in camp half-blood. Another reason why I chose these places was because New York is where Percy fought off one of the Furies on ...
