The series, Den of Mercenaries, has my full attention. The writing is fantastic, the voice of the narrator grabs you and doesn't let go, the scenes aren't overplayed, it is easy to connect to the characters, and the flaws are wonderful. Nobody is perfect, mistakes are made, but you see the humanity in each.

Den is the name of two identical sword and planet fictional characters created by Richard Corben. The first appeared in the 1968 animated short film Neverwhere. The second has been appearing in the medium of comics since 1973, and in short stories that have been collected for the most part in trade paperbacks.

Den (comics) - Wikipedia

The Lion's Den is a bizarre story that starts out as a simple rivalry between friends but slowly turns into something more sinister. There are two narratives being told in alternating chapters. One takes place in the present, following Belle on her trip aboard the yacht; the other begins ten years ago and finally meets the current story in the very last chapter.

Becky asks the Chosen One to retrieve a book from Derek in the East Side of the Den. Derek himself is located just outside of Mom's Diner, but unfortunately of no help whatsoever. The book in question is " The Lavender Flower " (a romantic novel) and spawns somewhere in the East Side, though the exact location is random.

Barbara Taylor Bradford, the author of "In the Lion's Den", "The House of Falconer" Book Two, has written an intriguing, compelling, captivating, and entertaining novel. This is the second book in the series, and I really think one would benefit by reading the first but could read this as a stand-alone.
