The Tuscan Child. Written by Rhys Bowen. Review by Linda Harris Sittig. Set against the backdrop of the Tuscan hills of Italy, this story is told through dual narrators. One is Hugo Langley, a British bomber shot down in 1944 into a German-occupied area of Italy. The other narrator is Joanna Langley, his modern-day estranged daughter who discovers, after his death, an unopened letter addressed thirty years ago to a woman in Tuscany—a woman that Joanna knows nothing about.
